ten, and I'll do it; say quick, man."

"Down," said the avuncular Smith, holding out his hand.

Cuff affected great indignation. "Right is right," he remarked, "but that isn't right, anyhow. Here am I in this line, 27 years, man and boy, come lady day, and nobody can ever say as I have kept my word. If I've told a chap as I'd nab him, I have nabbed him always. If I've told a chap as I'd pay him, I have paid always—likewise. Right is right; you identify this ere cabinet and this ere man, and there's your money."

"Well, agreed," said Smith. The bargain was struck, and brandy and water ratified the compact.

The next day, Smith, having duly identified the cabinet, Cuff and his witnesses presented themselves at the park. Wilkins, who knew the officer, again introduced him to Harry.

"Have you any clue," asked Harry, after Mr. Cuff had repeated his old apology for intruding.

SATURDAY MORNING, JAN. 14, 1890.

The Lawrence Calamity.

Owing to the rearrangement of the mails Thursday, we were unable to furnish any further particulars of the fearful calamity in our paper yesterday.

The following additional information relative to the disaster, we gather from the Boston Herald of Thursday:

The loss on the Mill by this disaster is estimated at $900,000, on which there is insurance against fire, but none against such a loss as this.

The ruins lay in one confused heap, covering an area of about two acres and piled up to a height of about thirty feet.

From nearly every hole and crevice in this vast pile, from the top, from the sides, and in fact from every fissure from whence a voice from the inside could make its way, came shrieks for help, groans of anguish, prayers and moanings, and in many, very many cases, the poor sufferers could be distinctly seen, talked to and even reached by the hand from the outside. Many thus implored were encouraged and sustained by assurances of safety, and in many cases, cups of coffee could be, and were passed down to those below, who alas! after all their near approach to safety, saw hour after hour pass away until at last, the frightful cry of fire, and the greedy licking of the flames as they approached with fearful rapidity, cracking and hissing, all over the remains on the ground, told them too plainly that all hope of life was gone. The fall of the building took place just as the mill was being lighted up, and outside, of course all was dark.

To obviate this difficulty huge fires were made to the leeward of the ruins, and the light thus made illuminated the horrible scene with inexpressible grandeur.

THE ATTEMPT AT RESCUE.

At this time—six o'clock—fifteen hundred persons gathered about the spot, and by the light of the fires the more daring were on top, crawling under the ruins, fixing ropes, and doing all in their power to extricate those within. At the outset their efforts were quite successful. About 75 persons, men, women and children, more or less wounded, were taken out, and, it is recognized, carried home, and if not, taken to the City Hall, which had been converted into a temporary hospital. After the first hour, however, the work becomes much more dangerous, by reason of the fall of timbers as displacements are made, and often the rescued and the rescuer are again in danger of a fresh entombment.

WOMAN'S HEROISM.

At one point when a rope had been fixed to a projecting timber, a call was made to the crowd to take hold and pull with a will, but for a few minutes, such was the danger of the attempt—for the beam in falling might engulf all near it—for a few minutes we say, the call was unheeded. Men shuddered and drew back—they would risk much to aid those below, but life was sweet, and the danger great. At this critical juncture, a woman rushed from among the crowd, and during the spectators to follow, seized the rope and attempted to mount the pile of smoldering ruins to clear away with her hands. The example was enough, not a word was said, but strong hands at once drew the female back; and then there was no lack of hands to the rope; the beam was drawn out and at least two sufferers released from the opening thus made.

Besides those thus saved, a large number of operatives, mostly males, who were in the weaving room, which is in the lower story, managed to escape by crawling up from that room through a couple of low windows which were not obstructed. The weaving room was partially saved by a heavy stone floor of the story above, and many in this department were thus saved. The sights and scenes at this period of the disaster were frightful. One poor girl, alive and fully conscious, was dragged from the east end of the fallen mass, with her left arm torn from the socket, and her body and legs awfully mangled. She was taken by her friends but could not have survived long. In one place the bodies of three girls were found locked in each other's arms, but were quite dead. They could not be removed without mangle the bodies, and being abandoned for a time, the flames broke out before another attempt was made, and all three perished by the fire.

One Irishman was taken out quite unhurt and his first act was to feel in his pocket, from whence he drew forth a stout "dudder" and seizing a brand from the fire, he lit his pipe and went his way.

Next from the ruins we saw the dead body of a lad, and following him was borne a girl with one of her ankles burnt to a crisp. She had been confined by one foot between two beams and only by the utmost exertion was she recovered. She was also taken home by her friends.

A young girl was released just before the flames burst forth, and in answer to a question, stated that she was unhurt. It afterwards appeared that her right arm was badly broken near the wrist, but in the excitement of the moment and in the joy of deliverance from a dreadful death, she had not noticed the hurt.

One woman was found with her head jammed between two heavy beams, and pressed so that it was not thicker than the thickness of a hand. It was a sickening sight.

Perhaps one of the saddest episodes of the whole calamity was the fate of Mr. Maurice Palmer, who was an overseer in the mill. In the fall he was so embedded in the ruins that he could not be extricated before the fire, and seeing the dreadful element approaching him, he, in his agony and despair, determined not to be roasted to death, and so drew his pocket-knife and cut his throat. He was, however, taken out alive and would have survived but for the self-inflicted injury. Who, however, can judge the anguish and agony which induced the fearful deed?

One man was rescued from the ruins about 4 o'clock in the morning, and strange to say, he was so little injured that he was able to walk to his house. He was between two bales of cotton, at a place where a plentiful supply of water was poured on at the commencement of the fire. His escape was almost miraculous.

In the afternoon another man was discovered alive in one of the chimneys that remained standing. There was a small hole in the chimney from which his voice was heard by some persons at work upon the ruins in the vicinity, and he was taken out alive.

THE INJURED.

Mary Ann Coleman, aged 15, has an arm broken and head badly cut. Miss Coleman was employed in the spinning room, and the first sensation that struck her, prior to the crash was, she "heard something fall," after which she knew nothing until her rescue.

Sarah Boyle, aged 17, is severely injured in the left foot. She was rescued from beneath a large beam, prior to the fire. She worked in the lower card room, and her first knowledge of the disaster was, she "felt a sudden shock."

Elizabeth Ward, aged 22. Severely injured across the hips. Worked in the card room.

John Ward, husband of the above, severely injured at the same time.

Nancy Connelly severely but not dangerously wounded.

Patrick Connelly, slightly injured. A miraculous escape. About quarter to five, when about lighting up, heard something overhead. Looked up and "saw the roofs and every thing coming down upon him." He instantly ran for the side of the building, and gave himself up to die. Suddenly he saw daylight through the ruins, and made his way out without assistance.

Ellen Mahoney, aged 19. Thigh and foot badly injured. Worked in the card room. Heard some alarm—saw people running—thought the building had been struck by a thunderbolt.

Thomas Conner, aged 22 years. Badly injured across the lower part of his abdomen and legs. Saw the building begin to fall, and endeavored to run out, but was prostrated beneath the falling mass, and providentially rescued without mortal injury.

Bridget Bradley, 17 years of age. Badly injured in back and shoulders; also terribly cut on the head. Miss Bradley was standing between her rooms in the weaving room when the roof fell. She lay insensible some time, and when she recovered her senses, she began to scream. Her cries attracted the attention of the rescuers, who, by sawing off the timbers that were above, and by the aid of ropes succeeded in hauling her from the ruins. She remained half-dead the mass upwards of an hour and a half.

Kate Harrihy, aged 15. A deplorable case, as the poor creature has a leg and an arm broken, and is terribly cut in the face and eyes.

Henry Bakeman, 36 years old. Both legs crushed.

George Kvadoller. Shoulder broken and severe injuries in head and hands. Worked in the dressing room.

Henry Koehler, severe injuries in his head, and in parts of his body. Has not spoken a word since his rescue.

Mary York, badly bruised and cut in the head, and one of her ankles is probably broken. She worked in the dressing room.

Margaret Hamilton, aged 14. A truly melancholy case. This was her first day's work in the Pemberton Mills, and commenced work in the spinning room. A devoted mother is attending her, and when asked what injuries her daughter had received, she replied, "Her arm is broken, and, oh! my God! and here the poor woman burst into a flood of tears, "my poor darling is all broken!" The unfortunate girl is not expected to live. The name of her mother is Mary Ann Hamilton. The daughter was the main support of the mother and four younger children.

Robert Hayes, right arm broken, and head and arms badly bruised. He worked in the dressing room. He says the crash was like a shot from a gun, and he had no time to "take one step from the other."

Remained insensible until he found himself on the mattress in the City Hall.

Mary Kennedy, aged 16, has a leg broken, and her head and face so badly injured that she can scarcely articulate.

Ira D. Locke, has an ankle broken, and his body is badly burnt. He was in the ruins six hours, and says he "suffered much from cold."

The above does not include the names of all those rescued alive, for a number were carried to their homes by their friends, and thus did not come under the reporter's notice.

The injured have an abundance of medical attendance from the local physicians, as well as those from Lowell, Manchester, Haverhill, and other places.

In the ward for the sick, our reporter witnessed an appalling scene. One poor girl whose case was regarded by the doctors as desperate, was approached by the physician and our reporter, and in answer to questions from the doctor made three or four answers, when suddenly she raised herself into a sitting posture and wildly tossing her arms, with a fearful scream, in a moment yielded up her life and fell back a corpse! Such scenes as this beggar description.

Among those who escaped was Miss Mary Wilson. She worked in the fifth story and she says she first felt the floor sinking as it were from under her feet, then there was a crash, and it was all over in an instant. She found herself lying up on the top of a pile of rubbish, and she was injured by a severe laceration of one of her arms, which opened an artery and caused considerable loss of blood.

INCIDENTS.

When the fire commenced one of the engineers forced his way against the smoke and flame to try and rescue some of those whose voices he could hear.

Suddenly he caught a glimpse of three persons, imprisoned by a crumbled partition—two men and a woman. He even caught one of the men by the hand, and hoped to draw him out, but the crackling of the flames around him, and the warning voice of an officer, impelled him reluctantly to desist, and by a timely retreat to save his own life. Neither of the three persons appeared injured at all, and they must have literally roasted alive.

One of the female operatives escaped by a confusion which did her infinite credit. She was in the fifth story in a part of the building, when, having but a moment's warning of the fall of the building, she sprang to the elevator. She clasped firmly hold of one of the hoisting ropes, and slid rapidly and safely down its whole length, through five stories, emerging from the building just in season to escape destruction. Through the whole night she was one of the most valuable nurses in the temporary hospital at the City Hall, and her judgment showed her to be the woman for the illness. Her name is Olive Bridges, and she hails from Calais, Me.

SCENES IN THE CITY HALL.

Immediately after the dreadful occurrence, the City Hall was thrown open, by order of the Mayor, as a hospital for the wounded, and a receptacle for the dead.

At 7 o'clock this morning, the stairways were thronged by a multitude of people, every one apparently in an agonizing state of suspense to ascertain whether a father, husband, wife or child had been immolated in the awful funeral pyre.

Stretched on mattresses around the hall were men, women and children, all more or less injured—some dreadfully mangled.

On the right of the entrance, in a small ante-room, were stretched the corpses of thirty-six persons of both sexes, old and young. The bodies were so close together that it was difficult to pass between them without treading upon a mangled limb. Feet were crushed—shoulders, arms, legs, bodies, all terribly mangled and mangled. Faces so disfigured that it would be difficult for the most intimate friends to recognize the bodies by the countenances.

In the midst of the ghastly throng was to be seen a Minister of God carefully scanning each countenance, and we could see a tear-drop from his eyes upon more than one of the ghastly dead.

A frantic mother rushed past the officers in charge of the door, and recognizing the dead and mangled body of a child, in the midst of the mass, clasped it, called it by endearing names, and wept—as mothers weep at such dreadful moments.

THE SUMMING UP.

It is generally agreed by the best authorities that one hundred and sixty-two persons are missing, and it is admitted that fifty two persons are yet buried in the ruins.

THE CAUSE.

It appears to be the opinion of those well informed on the subject, that the cause of the falling of the mill was a bad foundation and somewhat imperfect construction. The severe cold weather and the subsequent sudden thaw, loosened the foundation and caused this most lamentable calamity. The evidence before the Coroner's jury may develop it more precisely.

The Obstruction to Travel.

"When shall my troubles have an end!" For the last ten days this ejaculation has been frequently uttered by Newport travellers, and thought still more frequently. In fact, it may be said that travelling "has been a pursuit under difficulties."

First, we had the delay and uncertainty attendant upon the Perry's contest with the ice, for several days. Leaving here at 8 A. M., Providence was reached "as soon as possible," which was proved to be a mighty "uncertain quantity in calculation;" returning, we found home at any time between five and nine o'clock in the evening. This lasted for several days, but it was nothing to what was hidden in the future. The matter reached a climax Tuesday last. The Perry left Providence for Newport as usual, with her mails, baggage and passengers; the end of her voyage was, the reaching Field's Point, cutting a hole through the boat's side sufficient to sink, and transferring her passengers and mails to the steamer Bradford Durfee. There some passengers were painfully questioning their own interior spirits, as to when their troubles should end. Could they have penetrated the veil which hung between them and "coming events," they would have seen what they subsequently learned, that deliverance was not yet.

The Bradford Durfee said passengers to Fall River, where they took passage for Newport on board of the State of Maine. Soon after 8 o'clock, they started on what they trusted at last, was to be a short and successful passage for Newport. But this "dream of bliss" was very soon dissipated by the engineer's bell, ringing off steam; all were again upon foot, and anxiously endeavoring to ascertain what new troubles were at hand; the loud, ominous rattle of the chain announced that they were at anchor; then came the unwelcome tidings, that unless the fog cleared away—not at all probable—the steamer would remain at anchor until morning; this proved to be the case, the passengers arriving at Newport about 8 o'clock Wednesday morning. The cause of anchoring by the State of Maine, was the fact that her officers did not think it was safe to trust to her compasses, there being something mysterious about their working.

While these occurrences were taking place, people in Newport were "wondering where the Perry was." Inquiries at the Express Office were answered, "the boat did not intend to leave until a late hour." This pacified partially, the excitement, until the news of her injury came authenticated. At Long Wharf there was another anxious waiting of those who were "wondering when the State of Maine would come along." They spent the night about equally divided in employment, between sleeping and wondering.

At 2 o'clock A. M., passengers began gathering at the Depot for Boston and Providence. They were soon engaged in the same kind of employment as had been their "illustrious predecessors"—half wondering and half sleeping. At four A. M., the steamer—punctual under the circumstances—look off for Boston and Providence. At 2 P. M. in Providence, passengers were seen "wondering" on the Perry Wharf "where the Perry was?" Learning from a few words how the case stood, said wonderers had a rapid passage from said wharf to the Bradford. There were found persons who had left Boston hoping to be at Newport by 4 o'clock, but saw the time of arrival indefinitely postponed. The Bradford on her down trip encountered a large field of solid ice, over four inches thick, and twice during the contest, was the noble boat brought to a stand still. But perseverance overcame the obstacles. After leaving Bristol Ferry, the boat was again stopped, and it was found that a broken float was rapidly ripping up her wheel-house, which was already badly injured.

One result of all of these mishaps and uncertainties, is a general expression of opinion, "that no ought to have a Railroad." Another result is, that many are forming the opinion that nothing but a want of energy has deprived us of this convenience. Where in Massachusetts, Rhode Island or Connecticut, is another City, possessing the number of inhabitants, the wealth, and natural business facilities that Newport has, that has so poor travelling facilities? Or that has done so little to help itself in so important a matter? Shall the present opportunity be lost?

Aid for the Lawrence Sufferers.

It will be seen by the following correspondence, that Walter S. Hunter, Esq., will repeat his interesting lecture on Africa before the Redwood Library Association Tuesday evening, 17th inst.,—the proceeds to be devoted to the very laudable object of aiding the sufferers by the recent calamity at Lawrence. As there will be a two-fold inducement, we trust the lecture will be numerously attended.

FOUSEL'S PABULUM VITÆ.

THE GREAT FRENCH REMEDY.

Dr. Fousel's Pabulum Vitæ, possesses extraordinary properties for the speedy and permanent cure of CONSUMPTION, BRONCHITIS, COUGHS, COLDS, AND ALL PULMONARY DISEASES.

This celebrated specific is now universally acknowledged to be infinitely superior to all other preparations for the cure of Pulmonary Disease, both from its innocent nature and its most astonishing curative properties; it being the only remedy known that will arrest the development of Tubercles in the Lungs, or restore the vital functions of the pulmonary organs to their normal condition. Its invaluable properties have obtained for it the highest recommendations and praise from some of the most eminent physicians and chemists in the country; while the best and surest proofs of its merits are afforded by the numerous testimonials of its great efficacy in conquering disease, which are constantly received from our most respectable citizens.

Individuals in all stages of pulmonary disease should not fail to give it a trial, as it can be administered to the most delicate and feeble with perfect safety and certain relief; and we herewith insert a few testimonials for their encouragement, selected from hundreds of like ones.

Certificate of Dr. A. A. HAYES, in reference to the unequalled virtues of this great discovery.

This preparation, by chemical analysis, was proved to be free from opium or any of its compounds; nor were any of the alkaloids present. It does not contain any mercurial or mineral substance, but consists wholly of volatile, diffusible agents, which afford rapidly at a moderate temperature. Most of the substances present are efficiently used in alleviating pulmonary disease; but the device by which they are combined is new and original, and adapts the compound to inhalation, or other modes of administration.

Respectfully,

A. A. HAYES, M. D., State Assayer,

14 Boston Street, Boston, Dec. 19, 1887.

Testimonial from the Assistant Superintendent of Health:

Boston, Oct. 5, 1889.

Sir:—It affords me great pleasure in recommending to those troubled with Pulmonary Complaints the use of Fousel's Pabulum Vitæ; and my own experience has shown that for Coughs and Colds it possesses qualities of great merit, and I would most cheerfully recommend its use to those troubled with the above complaints, so common to our climate.

Respectfully yours,

(Signed) DANIEL B. CURTIS,

To P. J. LAFOREX, Room 12, City Hall.

P. J. LAFOREX, Esq.,

Dear Sir:—This may certify that I have used Fousel's Pabulum Vitæ, and I consider it the best article that I have ever used for pulmonary complaints. My wife has used it for severe colds, and its effect was magical; and I have no objection to your referring in any way to me that you deem expedient.

I have given the above named a fair trial, and with confidence advise all that are afflicted with colds or pulmonary complaints to try it.

This elicited cries of approval from the Republican side, but the Democrats objected. Remarks were made by Mr. Wright, Ad. Dem., of Tennessee, in reply to his colleague, Mr. Strokes, and Mr. Leake, Ad. Dem., Va., in the course of some explanations; claimed that Virginia as a matter of defense, has the right secede from the Union. The House then adjourned without a vote for Speaker.
